OF BOOKS IN

The Jamaica Plain Branch Library

OF THE

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY.

With an Appendix.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY

FIRST EDITION. APRIL, 1878.

BOSTON:
ISSUED BY THE LIBRARY.
ROCKWELL & CHURCHILL, CITY PRINTERS.
1878.

EXPLANATIONS.

In June, 1876, a Delivery of the Roxbury Branch of the Boston Public Library was established in Curtis Hall, Jamaica Plain. By a vote of the City Council in June, 1877, the sum of ten thousand dollars was appropriated for the establishment of a Branch Library. A room having been fitted up in Curtis Hall, and a collection of books having been purchased, the Library was opened to the public on the first of September, 1877, and was formally dedicated on the sixth of the following December.

This Catalogue contains the titles of 5,819 volumes, with entries under the names of authors, and titles, or subjects. Its scope has been considerably enlarged by references to the best books in the Central Library. These and all books in the Central Library suitable for circulation may be lent to readers at this Branch, and they will be delivered, if in the Central Library at the time, on the day after the application is made. The printed catalogues of the Central Library can be found on the tables at this Branch.

Books are entered in this Catalogue under the names of authors, when known; under the initials of the authors' names when these only appear, the last initial being put first; under the pseudonymes, or assumed names, of the writers, when the real ones are not ascertained. Such books are also entered under their titles or subjects, followed by the names, initials, or pseudonymes of the authors. In case of an anonymous book the author of which is unknown, the entry is under the first word of the title, not an article.

Initials enclosed within marks of parenthesis stand for Christian names which are not usually retained by the person to whom they properly belong; as Agassiz, L. (J. R.) In the headings of titles, the German diphthongs, ä, ö, ü, are written ae, oe, ue; Goethe occurs, for example, before Goldsmith, instead of after it. An italicized name within marks of parenthesis following the name of an author is the pseudonym of such author; as Hector, A. F. (Mrs. Alexander), or another form of the name, as Napoléon I. (Nap léon Bonaparte). Brackets, within titles, enclose words additional, or changed in form.

Holders of Cards at this Branch Library can take out one volume at a time from the Branch, and one volume from the Bates Hall of the Central Library. One volume can also be taken from the Lower Hall of the Central Library, if the applicant at the time has none from the Branch.

Fiction and juvenile books published within one year may circulate for seven days; all other books for fourteen days. No transfers of books by card are permitted. No book can be taken out again by the person returning it until it has remained one day in its place on the shelf.

Lib. 3534.50. Classical biographies are to be found in W. Smith's "Dictionary of Greek and Roman biography and mythology," Centr. Lib. 2930.7.

See the Lower Hall Catalogue of history, etc., p. 32, for a survey of the literature of the history of Boston.

Drake's "History and antiquities of Boston," Centr. Lib. 222.1; 2350.10, comes down only to 1770. Frothingham's "Life of Joseph Warren," Centr. Lib. 242.1, and his "Siege of Boston," 932.5, continue the story into the beginning of the revolutionary period. The authorities for the interval 1761–76 will be found in the Bulletin for July, 1875. Lossing's "Pictorial field-book of the revolution," 931.6, has interest for this period, subsequent to which the reader will best depend upon the histories of Massachusetts, like Barry's, 933.16.

For the associations and history of localities, see Shurtleff's "Topographical and historical description of Boston," Centr. Lib. 4451.20, and Drake's "Old landmarks," 1335.10, which covers a wider area, and is more popularly written.

Bunyan, J. The pilgrim's progress from this world to that which is to come..... 837.13

The most popular life is by Southey, Centr. Lib. 889.11, which gave occasion to Scott's review in his "Miscellanies," Centr. Lib. 2577.5.21, and to Macaulay's eulogistic essay, Centr. Lib. 863.1; 905.20; 1966.3.2, originally in the Edinburgh review, Dec., 1830, the views in which he repeated in his contribution to the Encyclopædia Britannica, and in his "History of England." 834.5. The views of Hallam, 1514.14, are less eulogistic, as he thinks Bunyan over-estimated. For critical estimates, see Dunlop's "History of fiction," 514.1; Kingsley's "New miscellanies," 1524.6; and the references in Allibone, R.R., C.1, MacClintock and Strong, R.R., D.5, etc. Whittier has a sketch in his "Old portraits," 1515.23.1.

The opinion held by Hume that Cromwell was a "fanatical hypocrite," was commonly accepted by the biographers of the last century. Southey thinks that Cromwell was penitent for his career. Forster, in his "Lives of the British statesmen," Centr. Lib. 894.3.1; 4547.19.6, 7, advanced a belief in Cromwell's essential hypocrisy, without indiscriminate denunciation of him; but in a later essay his estimate is a higher one. Carlyle takes the decided ground of a champion; and his position has greatly influenced the more recent opinions. See also his "Heroes and hero-worship," Centr. Lib. 885.13; 2474.54. Lamartine and Merle de Aubigné have vindicated him. Guizot admires his ability, but regards him as a revolutionary despot. Macaulay's estimate will be found in vol. 1 of his "History of England," 834.5. See Campbell's "Lives of the chancellors," Centr. Lib. 568.1; 4165.6; 4542.50. Evelyn's Diary, Centr. The life by Forster is the latest and most authoritative, the writer having been Mr. Dickens's life-long friend and his literary executor. Fields's "Yesterdays with authors," also in Atlantic monthly, vol. 26, consists chiefly of personal reminiscences and of letters. See Taine's "History of English literature," 1513.1, the Dictionaries of Allibone and Thomas, and the Index to Harper's monthly. "The Dickens dictionary" is a key to the characters in his novels.

These novels mostly depict fashionable and political life during the author's early career, himself and his opponents appearing in "Vivian Grey;" Croker and others in "Coningsby;" while Byron and others figure in "Venetia." His "Lothair," however, is a picture of the catholic reaction of later times.

These are translations of some of the best of the novels of George Sand. Most of her works, which are very numerous, can be found in the original French in the Card Catalogue of the Central Library. The best account of her life is given in her own description in the "Histoire de ma vie," Centr. Lib. 2654.77. This is, however, a revelation of her inner life rather than a narrative of events. Her death, in 1876, called forth extended notices in periodicals, to be found in the Central Library.

Duerer, A. Schefer, L. The artist's married life 615.4

Many valuable works upon Dürer have been published within a few years. For the general reader the biographies by Mary M. Heaton, Centr. Lib. 8063.9, and W. B. Scott, Centr. Lib. 8065.9, will be found thorough and interesting. M. F. Sweetser's "Dürer," Centr. Lib. 4069.22, is a short account. Among illustrated works in the Central Library are the "Dürer album," 8060.17; "The Little passion," reproduced in fac-simile, 8070.53; and "La vie de la sainte vierge Marie en vingt gravures; reproduction," Cab. G.2.5. The following are critical studies: Allihn, 8065.51; Ephrussi, *4061.35; Hausmann, 8061.11; Van Eye, 4065.16; Heller, 4065.13; Marggraff, 8067.22; Retberg, *8073.7; Sallet, 4078.3; and Schöber, 4067.33.

A series of articles on Dürer can be found in the "Gazette des beaux-arts," 1860 and 1877, Centr. Lib. 7320a.50; and in the "Portfolio," 1877, Centr. Lib. C.C.1.

Histories of painting and engraving should be consulted.

Schefer's "The artist's married life" describes in the guise of fiction the domestic life of Dürer.

The Gray collection of engravings at the Museum of fine arts, Boston, contains many rare impressions of Dürer's engravings. Excellent heliotype reproductions by Amand-Durand can be seen at the Central Library.

Franklin's Autobiography comes down only to 1758, and was originally printed from a somewhat imperfect copy of his manuscript. Of the many editions which have been published, the most authoritative is the one with Sparks's continuation, which is prefixed to his edition of Franklin's Works, Centr. Lib. 286.2.1; 2400.1.1. See also Centr. Lib. 2342.10. Mr. Bigelow a few years since discovered the original manuscript, which contains some corrections and additions. The "Life, written by himself," consists of extracts from his autobiography, his letters, etc.

For lists of works by Franklin or about him, see the Central Library catalogues.

The most elaborate English biography is Carlyle's, which is reviewed by J. R. Lowell in the North American review, 2212.1, vol. 102. Abbott's is more popular; its chapters originally appeared in Harper's monthly, 2112.1, vol. 49. Stahr's "Lessing," 1213.3, the lives of Voltaire, and the literary histories of Germany for the last century, may be consulted for Frederic's literary character and associations. See also papers in Harper's monthly, 2112.1, vols. 18 and 25.

Histories of Prussia, Germany, and the Seven years' war all necessarily cover the career of Frederic.

Short studies on great subjects. 3 v. 1514.24

Froude as a historian is graphic and readable; but his opinions are often dogmatically given, and his championship of Henry VIII, and defamation of the Queen of Scots, have drawn out adversaries, who criticise him severely. His views on Ireland and its connection with English history are not satisfactory to Irish critics.

Lathrop, G. P. A study of Hawthorne 1138.1
Stephen, L. Hours in a library 1535.16
Hawthorne supplies much of autobiographic interest in the introduction to "The scarlet letter," and in his Note-books. He was for a brief season a sojourner with the Brook farm associates, at West Roxbury, whom he is supposed to idealize in his "Blithedale romance." See the Atlantic monthly, 2113.1.17, p. 565, etc.
Fields, in his "Yesterdays with authors," supplies some of his correspondence. See G. W. Curtis's paper on Hawthorne, in Harper's monthly, 2112.1.20, and in the North American review, 2212.1.99; also Smiles's "Brief biographies," 1225.6; and the accounts of Griswold, Duyckinck, and Allibone. Dr. Holmes gives an account of his last days, in the Atlantic monthly, 2113.1.14.
See essays by Longfellow, in his Prose works, 1536.3.1, or North American review, 2212.1.45; by Whipple, in his "Character and characteristic men," 1515.28, or Atlantic monthly, 2113.1.5; by Stoddard, in Harper's monthly, 2112.1.45; in the Atlantic monthly, 2113.1.22; and in the Cornhill magazine, 2116.1.27.

Of the translations of Homer, Chapman's is an early English version. Pope's is far from exact or from suiting modern notions of Homer's grandeur, but it is of great repute, and almost becomes an original poem from the infusion of Pope's characteristics. Among the later translations are those of Bryant; Worsley and Conington, Centr. Lib. 4995.5 and 4995.6; the Earl of Derby, Centr. Lib. 4998.24, and Merivale, Centr. Lib. 4994.2.

Lever's novels are mostly pictures of Irish life and character. "The knight of Gwynne" concerns the bringing about of the union of 1801. The military and convivial Irishman is drawn in "Harry Lorrequer," "Charles O'Malley," and "Jack Hinton." The breaking up of the old families gives plots and character to "The O'Donoghue" and "The Martins of Cro' Martin."

Macaulay's "History," a fragment of what he contemplated, is generally accounted the most brilliant piece of historical writing in our day, though it is much criticised on some points. As an essayist he holds the highest rank among modern writers. The "Lays of ancient Rome" are spirited, and have an especial interest for the young.

Consult Allibone's elaborate article, in which are given the authorities with copious citations upon the chief phases of Milton's life and writings; also MacClintock and Strong's Cyclopædia, R.R., D.5. It has been the fault of most of the lives, that they have been partisan, either in respect to politics or religion. Masson's "Life of Milton," Centr. Lib. 561.2; Centr. Lib. 2445.51, is a very elaborate and valuable work, of which three volumes have been published, and others are promised. The Note in the Lower Hall Catalogue of history, p. 187, mentions many other works on Milton.

Abbott's History, which is very popular with American readers, is regarded as too laudatory of Napoleon, and its views are not accepted by careful students.

The principal biographies of Napoleon are characterized in the Notes in the Lower Hall Catalogue of history, pp. 196, 197. Histories of France must be consulted, such as Thiers's "History of the consulate and the empire of Napoleon," Centr. Lib. 1002.6; Centr. Lib. 6645.12; and histories of Europe, such as Alison's "History of Europe, 1789-1815," 1013.9; and Napier's "History of the war in the peninsula," Centr. Lib. 1004.1; Centr. Lib. 1004.2. Lanfrey's "History of Napoleon the first," Centr. Lib. 1604.2; Centr. Lib. 4625.69, is one of the latest and most important studies of Napoleon. The account in the "Nouvelle biographie générale," Centr. Lib. 2252.2.37, is very complete.

A list of works of fiction and dramas founded on the history of France at the time of Napoleon can be found in the Central Library Class list for English prose fiction, p. 51.

Napoléon III. (Louis Napoléon Bonaparte.)

Napoleonic ideas. Translated by J. R. Dorr 1525.19

Abbott, J. S. C. History of 1212.3

Abbott's History is the work of a warm partisan; it comes down to 1868. His career previous to the Crimean war is characterized in Kinglake's 14th chapter of his "Invasion of the Crimea," 838.6; 1014.5; and in Alison's "History of Europe, 1815-52," 1013.10. His "Napoleonic ideas" sets forth his own theory of government, which, under color of a life of the Roman conqueror, he has enforced in his "History of Cæsar," Centr. Lib. 931.2; Centr. Lib. 4944.2; Centr. Lib. 4944.3; Centr. Lib. 4944.6. Blanchard Jerrold's "Life of Napoleon III," Centr. Lib. 2644.61, is the most elaborate work in English. Victor Hugo's denunciations are to be found in the Central Library catalogues. The accounts in the "Nouvelle biographie générale," Centr. Lib. 2252.2.37, should be consulted.

Works of fiction and dramas suggested by events during this period of French history are to be found in the Central Library Class list for English prose fiction, p. 52.

Book 1 of Schiller's "History of the revolt of the United Netherlands," Centr. Lib. 854.14, continued in 818.10, traces the history of this country previous to the 16th century; and there is a summary from the Roman period down in the introduction to Motley's "Rise of the Dutch republic."

The rise and early progress of the reformation are described in histories of Charles v and Philip II, and in Fisher's "Reformation," ch. 9, 1013.7. The well-known works of Motley are of the first importance, as using much unprinted material, not before availed of. The "Dutch republic" comes first in order, then its sequel, the "United Netherlands," and next his "John of Barneveld." A list of works of fiction and dramas illustrating the history and customs of this country, can be found in the Lower Hall Class list for English prose fiction, p. 89 (under Low countries).

The most popular life of Washington is Irving's. The earlier biographies by chief justice Marshall, Centr. Lib. 515.2, Centr. Lib. 515.15, Centr. Lib. 2340.20, Centr. Lib. 2341.3, and Sparks, 1131.1.1 above, must be consulted by those desirous of making a careful study of the subject. Everett's Life, written for the Encyclopædia Britannica, is based upon these works. In histories of the United States and of the American revolution Washington is a central figure.
